PRINCIPAL'S NOTE

Prof. A. Kuttialikutty

Today is the tomorrow, you were thinking about yesterday

The fourth issue of Campus Vibes, which we have endeavoured to make informative and appealing, provides a glimpse of 'Farook College: 2007-08'. As you journey through its annals, our objective of making the students placement-worthy glistens. The different departments pulsating with variegated activities are strung with the common Farookian bond of zeal and enthusiasm.

This newsletter links our past to the present and is a record to be cherished in future. For bringing our students to limelight our teachers act as the real instrument of motivation, reminding them, "Today is the tomorrow, you were thinking about yesterday". Our attempts are portrayed through these words and colours.

There is no dearth of activities in Farook College, but only those happenings of prime concern are incorporated here. As the Principal, I appreciate the earnest efforts undertaken by all those who have helped in framing this issue. Let the glory of Farook College be disseminated through this issue of vibes and be proved that quality will not attenuate with years.

ARABIC POEMS IN KERALA

The Department of Arabic has undertaken a project under the UGC CPE Programme entitled 'Collection, Edition, Translation and Publication of Arabic Poems in Kerala' for a duration of three years. The Department collected the poems written by the Arabic poets of Kerala from 15th century to the present time. The collected poems are compiled in seven volumes running into a total number of 2257 pages. Out of these the department has selected five poems written by Sheikh Zainuddin Makhdoom of Ponnani, Qadi Mohammed of Calicut and Umer Qadi of Veliyankode which are relevant in the historical, cultural and social perspective and translated them into English and brought out under the title 'The Legacy of Anti-Colonial Struggle: English translation of Medieval Kerala Arabic Poems.'

The Arabic poems which in this compilation depict the anti-colonial struggle against Portugese by Hindus and Muslims together under the leadership of the Zamorin of Calicut. These were the Poems urging the Muslims to fight against the Portugese colonialists. This compilation is an attempt to bring to the notice of people about this epoch-making historical struggle against colonialism carried out by Hindus and Muslims together. Fathul Mubeen and "Rousing the faithful to fight against the Portugese" are the two Arabic poems of Qadi Mohammed and Sheikh Zainuddin Makhdoom respectively included in this compilation. The other three poems are of Umer Qadi.

Dr. M.G.S. Narayanan leading the discussion in the workshop on Dictionary of Concepts in Historical Methods.

WORKSHOP ON DICTIONARY OF CONCEPTS IN HISTORICAL METHOD

A workshop was organised on 26-29 March 2008 in connection with the project undertaken by the Post-Graduate Department of History under the UGC CPE programme.

It discussed at length the entries prepared on the concepts selected to be included in the dictionary. The workshop was a like a colloquium of resource persons, teachers and post graduate students who actively participated in the workshop all the three days. Prof. M.G.S. Narayanan, Former Chairman, ICHR led the discussion in the workshop. The Dictionary is a compendium of such terms which are in common parlance, but imply specific connotation in scholarly historical discourse. It is an attempt to expose the conceptual clarity of such terms to teachers as well as students.

The Department of History is illustrated with its worthwhile academic and research activities. The 68th session of Indian History Congress held at Delhi University was the recent venue to witness their research work. P. Alassankutty explored the scope of ecotourism as a tool for the development of the state in his paper "Ecotourism and Development" presented at the session. He also delivered a lecture on 'Disaster Management' at KILA, Thrissur. Dr. M.R. Manmathan made an attempt in his research paper presented at the session to trace the social milieu of the Namboothiri Act of 1933. 'Social Farces and Transformation' and 'Customary Alliance and Modern Reformism' are the other research papers contributed by Dr. Manmathan during this period. Dr. T. Muhammed Ali conducted a minor research project on the "Relief Work in Malabar in the wake of the Rebellion of 1921". He dealt at length the 'Foucault and Discourse Analysis' at the National Seminar on 'Recent Trends in Historiography and Social Theory' at Perambra.

they met the Giants

The teeming lot of Farook College, aspiring to invade greater heights in business and entrepreneurship were fortunate to meet the business giants of Kerala. It is a well known fact that most of the failures in this sector are due to the lack of presence of mind and not of degrees.

The two day programme entitled "Meet the Giants" brought under the CPE scheme of UGC was conducted by the Entrepreneurship Development Club on 7th - 8th February 2008. The programme was inaugurated by C.P. Kunhimohammed, Executive Director of KRS. Citing Dhirubhai Ambani (Reliance) and Azim Premji (Wipro) as his role models, he pointed out that time management, ethics and good relationship with the employees are really important in the success of an entrepreneur.

Manhalamkuzhi Ali, M.L.A. and proprietor of Aysha Textiles - one of the biggest textile outlets in Kerala made a sketch of his career. He observed that an entrepreneur must develop an attitude to work hard without thinking of returns in the initial stage and look out for opportunities and utilise them to the optimum level. Nithyanand Kamath, MD of Ace Group of Companies, Noushad, Director of VKC Group of Companies, P.K. Shanavas, Joint MD of P.K. Group of Companies, Zuharabi, proprietor of Malabar Gem Palace and Shafi Chaliyam blessed the gathering with their presence.

a project of p.t.a. public address system

The Farook College P.T.A. has made vigorous attempts for the betterment of college. A public address system was installed in the college with the sponsorship of PTA. Abdurahiman Randathani, MLA, the Vice-President of PTA inaugurated the system. The announcements for the students have become very effective and made easier with the help of the public address system.

PTA provided funds to the college health centre to give free medical aid to college students and to organise various academic activities of the departments. Three computers were sponsored by PTA for office automation. PTA also funded the edu - support programme meant for the welfare of financially poor and meritorious students.
